The Garrick House Network is a unique networking and knowledge sharing tool for legal professionals working within construction firms. Set up by construction law firm Beale and Company (Beales), 190 members stay ahead of the game by asking questions, starting a discussion, attending events or simply learning from the regular insight provided by Beales.

A platform for connecting safely online and offline

It was more than five years ago that Partner in Beales Michael Archer saw the need for the online community.

“We wanted to create a unique network that would enable dialogue amongst legal professionals in the construction industry”

When Frank Joshi, CEO at Mvine, showed Michael the robust and reliable Mvine for Private Business Networks, the Partner saw his idea coming to life. The built-in content sharing capabilities of the Mvine platform would allow the firm to easily share relevant industry information, while its membership management capabilities would enable legal professionals to connect regularly and safely with peers – both online and offline.

The Garrick House Network today

With membership growing at a rate of 20 to 30 new members each year, regular Garrick House Network events attract around 100 attendees. Each seminar focuses on a legal topic that is current and relevant to members and includes speakers from both inside and outside of Beales. Members find that the seminars are a perfect opportunity for networking with peers, sharing knowledge and experience. The Mvine platform simplifies management of the attendance process. Katie reveals:

“We hold at least two events a year, we post all the event details on the Mvine platform. Network members automatically receive an alert and the simply RSVP through the site or by responding to the email.”

Members also receive emails alerting them of new articles, new discussions and new questions.

“They can just click on the link provided to view the item or download it in their own time.”

Putting members in control

The fine-grained security built into the Mvine platform puts network members in control of how much information they share and how much information they receive. Each member has a personalised profile where they can share as much or as little as they like with their peers.

Articles, news, discussions and events are published in one of seven different knowledge centres, each reflecting a different practice area – for example corporate or disputes. Members can choose which they belong to.

Today Beales is able to add value to both its clients and others in the industry, thanks to Mvine Private Business Networks. Katie concludes:

“The Mvine platform allows us to bring together clients and contacts to share knowledge, ask questions and, if they’ve got concerns, talk to someone who can help this allows them to stay up-to-date with any legal developments that might affect them”
